No U-turn on closure of children's centre

DEBRA FOX

A HAVERHILL children's centre will close after a final decision was made this week.

On Track, in Strasbourg Square, was one of numerous centres earmarked by Suffolk County Council to close its doors and merge its services.

The council's cabinet approved plans for an "alternative delivery model" for the nine affected centres on Tuesday.

First approved by the cabinet in January, the plan was "called in" by the county council's Labour group following concerns over how the decision was made, and the information provided to councillors.

Members of the scrutiny committee voted in equal numbers to uphold and reverse the original decision – bringing the plan back to the cabinet.

Anne Gower, a former county councillor, fought against the plan from its announcement last summer.

"I am hugely disappointed," she said. "There was all that evidence that the decision was flawed, in my opinion, and all those people who said this was the wrong thing."

"I think it's an appalling decision, and it's shortsighted."

On Track's building will close and services will merge with Haverhill's Cartwheels centre, in Greenfields Way.

Services will also be delivered elsewhere in the community, with the Chalkstone Community Centre, also in Strasbourg Square, a possible location.

Mum-of-one Jamie Pursey, 21, visits On

Track weekly with her son Riley, 2. She lives a 10 minute walk away from the centre.

Now she said will have to walk an hour to Cartwheels, with a pushchair, if the services she uses aren't delivered near to her home.

"This town doesn't have much good to offer people, and they keep taking it away," Jamie continued. "I can't afford to waste money on taxis to get there and back [to Cartwheels] and it is just so disappointing."

It would be helpful if the groups were delivered in the Chalkstone Community Centre, she said, but it would not be the same as having the centre to walk into.

Cllr Bryony Rudkin, the Labour group's spokesperson for children and young people, said the decision was made in five minutes and that there was no debate or discussion at the meeting.

She said: "It's really disappointing for families and young people in Suffolk, and we will continue to press the issue."

"This proves they knew what they wanted to do and they didn't listen to the consultation, and they didn't listen to anybody else including members of their own group."

More than £200,000 can be saved through the move without "directly affecting" staffing provision, the council said.

Cllr Gordon Jones, cabinet member for children's services, said he is "fully committed" to ensuring that services are delivered in locations suitable for families.

"There is no hard and fast rule that all children's centres need to deliver their full range of services from a single site," he said. "This decision will allow us to deliver more services for the community, from more locations."

"The needs of children and their families have changed over time and we must continue to develop our services accordingly."

Work will begin with communities in March, and services will begin relocation from April.

Council meeting postponed

RESIDENTS who arrived for Haverhill Town Council's meeting on Tuesday were sent home after not enough councillors turned up.

Only five councillors arrived for the meeting, which is held once a month.

A minimum of six councillors – about a third of the total – are needed for the meeting to be "quorate".

Cllrs Roger André, Ernie Goody, Pat Hanlon, Betty McLatchy and Clive Turner were present.

Cllrs Maureen Byrne, deputy mayor, and Philip French were sitting at the borough council as the authorities' full meetings clashed.

Colin Poole, town clerk, said: "Last night was unfortunate, but these things happen."

"It must be particularly irksome for those members of the public who took time out to attend the meeting and I am sorry that we couldn't cancel it earlier, but we didn't know for sure until the start of the meeting that it would be inquorate."

A number of apologies for absence were received in advance, Mr Poole added.

Speaking on Twitter, @DeepSuffolk said: "What a joke, five turned up out of 16 cllrs."

"They are up for election in a few weeks. Shambles."

The meeting will be held ahead of the planning meeting on March 3.

Visitors gather information at community event

ENGAGED: Visitors and staff at the Burton Centre's community event.

A COMMUNITY event at Haverhill's Burton Centre last Thursday highlighted the range of services available there.

Staff and volunteers from St Nicholas Hospice Care spoke about the centre's work, including volunteering opportunities, fundraising, the Hospice Neighbours team – which helps people with life-threatening illnesses in their own homes – and the Independent Living team, which aims to make living with dying better.

Draft plans for the "Garden of Life" which is due to open this summer at the centre, were displayed, and Healthwatch Suffolk, which asks people's opinions on health and social care, also had a stall.

Moirá Welham, hospice head of community partnership, said: "People seemed very interested in finding out what we do, which is exactly what we hoped for."

"Two visitors said on the day that they were interested in becoming Hospice Neighbours volunteers, which is fantastic." To find out more, call (01440) 848260.

Consultants chosen to plan town centre

HANNAH MIRSKY

THE organisation which will create a masterplan for Haverhill town centre has been chosen.

ONE Haverhill, a group made up of a wide range of community organisations, has chosen David Lock Associates, a team of experts specialising in planning and design, to redesign the centre of the town.

The first stage of the masterplan will be to understand the key issues facing the town centre and to identify different options for the plan.

The issues addressed will include how the town centre could be used, how people move around the area, and what could be done to make the streets more attractive.

There will also be engagement with stakeholders and Haverhill's community to help the planners understand what the town centre should be like. More details of the consultation will be announced shortly.

Sarah Howard, chairman of ONE Haverhill board, said: "This is the exciting first step towards the creation of the Haverhill town centre masterplan. David Lock Associates was selected from a very strong field of candidates."

CHANGE: Haverhill town centre will be transformed by the masterplan created by David Lock Associates.

"We have met with them several times now and I have been very impressed with their grasp of the town's history and its potential."

"As far as we are aware this is the first time that a community has been able to get so involved in mapping out the future of its town centre."

"Too often lip service is paid to consulting the public but this will be led by ONE Haverhill and the public will be very much involved."

"It is also very encouraging to see town, borough and county councillors working together on this project."

The masterplan will help to implement the Haverhill Vision 2031, making the town centre a more vibrant place.

The Haverhill Vision 2031 was produced following engagement and consultation, and was adopted by St Edmundsbury Borough Council in September last year.

The masterplan David Lock Associates will draw up will be a formal 'supplementary planning document' with the aim of it also being adopted by St Edmundsbury Borough Council.

'Loo roll' sculpture pulled into debate over public art

HANNAH MIRSKY

HAVERHILL'S "Spirit of Enterprise" sculpture has become embroiled in a debate about ugly public art.

Art critic Jonathan Jones named Maggi Hambling's scallop on the shore in Aldeburgh one of the worst pieces of public art in the UK.

The announcement, which came last week, sparked debate on social media about the merits of pieces of public art across Suffolk.

Some commenters claimed Haverhill's "Spirit of Enterprise" sculpture, known locally as "the loo roll", "the dustbin" and "the rat trap" was an example of less-than-beautiful public art.

The sculpture was officially opened in 2004 after being designed by artist Rob Olins with input from the pupils of Samuel Ward and Castle Manor sixth forms.

It is meant to represent a roll of cloth, in reference to Haverhill's history in the textile industry, and was the first laser-lit roundabout sculpture in the world.

Nic Rumsey, director of Haverhill Research Park, which is near the roundabout, said: "I believe public art is there to challenge, and what a dull world it would be if everyone had the same view."

"I am glad that the piece at the Spirit of Enterprise Roundabout is drawing comment and that is what it should do."

"I personally find it very striking and, like the adjacent Haverhill Research Park, it represents the future of Haverhill."

Cllr Roger André, the town's mayor, is also positive about the sculpture.

He said: "It's elegant and it tells people they have arrived in Haverhill. It's what we are

CONTROVERSIAL: The Spirit of Enterprise sculpture, which was designed to represent a roll of cloth. Inset: The scallop sculpture on the beach at Aldeburgh about, it's bright and modern.

"My view is that public art is expected to be controversial. We have to accept that, if anyone does a piece of art."

"I am sure the Sistine Chapel was criticised when it was first made."

Arts and leisure manager at Haverhill Town Council Nick Keeble added: "I think it's a nice strong piece of art. It creates debate and that's what art should do."

"All of it was built in Haverhill. I always drive past it and admire it."

He also emphasised that the majority of the funding for the sculpture came from local business, with a contribution towards infrastructure from St Edmundsbury Borough Council.

But people on the streets of Haverhill had mixed views about the sculpture when questioned this week.

"I'm one of those who calls it a loo roll," said Dawn Plumridge, 69, from Meadowsweet Close.

"I've never liked it from the time it went up. I just think that something better could have been done with the money, something more in keeping or something towards the older people and younger people in Haverhill."

Susan and John Collins, 63 and 67, who live in Cramswell Close, agree.

"We don't like it," Mrs

Collins said. "It seems to have been a bit of a waste of money. "I think most people don't realise what it is, that it's to do with industry. They just say: 'Whatever is it?'"

Samuel Beamon, 18, from Trudley Close, is more forgiving.

He said: "It's all right, but it looks a bit dull. It doesn't have enough lights. It could use a bit of brightening up."

But the artist who designed the sculpture, Rob Olins, says that the debate which his creation has generated is a good thing.

"How things look is very subjective and I'm always interested to hear what people have to say," he said. "You could say that the fact the local community talk about it at all is maybe a sign of its success?"

He added: "It was a very difficult structure to make and Haverhill is very lucky to have people who have the talent and skills to realise the project."

Car damaged as items thrown from shop roof

A CAR was damaged in Haverhill's High Street after people threw items at it from the top of a building.

The owner of the purple Nissan said she saw people on the roof of Iceland on the High Street last Sunday at around 1.30pm and later discovered damage to her car.

A spokesman for Haverhill police said that if anyone sees people on the roofs of buildings on the High Street, they should call Suffolk police on 101.

This comes after a number of other cases of criminal damage to vehicles in Haverhill.

The windscreen of a silver BMW was damaged on the evening of Monday, February 16, in Osprey Road, and there were three cars damaged in Elm Close overnight between Thursday, February 19 and Friday, February 20.

A blue Mazda and a silver Honda both had their rear lights damaged on the same occasion, and a red Seat's offside wing mirror was damaged.

Tools and bikes stolen by thieves

THOUSANDS of pounds worth of tools and bicycles have been stolen in a spate of break-ins to garden sheds and garages.

There have been 10 shed and garage burglaries in Haverhill since the start of February – with residents being warned to lock up and keep their property secure.

Many of these incidents saw tools and bicycles being stolen – with belongings to a value of around £2,500 stolen in total.

Six break-ins happened over 10 days between February 13 and February 23, during the school half term holiday.

Between 7am on February 13 and 8am on February 17, a garden shed was broken into on Recreation Road, and various tools and two bicycles were stolen. The bicycles were men's mountain bikes, one black, one red.

In the early hours of February 16, various tools were taken from two garden sheds in Dovehouse Road.

More tools were stolen from a garden shed in Mallow

HANNAH MIRSKY

Walk between February 15 and February 21, and sporting equipment was taken from a garage on Leather Lane overnight between Sunday, February 22 and Monday, February 23.

A garden shed was also targeted in the town's Wortham Place overnight between February 15, and February 16, but the intruders moved things around without taking anything.

A spokesman for Suffolk Police said: "Police are looking at potential links between these incidents and are asking residents to consider installing a relatively inexpensive shed alarm – available from good DIY stores – or to contact their local Safer Neighbourhood Team, by dialling 101, for free advice about garage and shed security."

They are advising local people to make sure their garden sheds and garages, and the valuable items within, are secure.

Residents can do this by making sure their bicycles are attached to the ground or something secure with a padlock and chain, and by locking tools away.

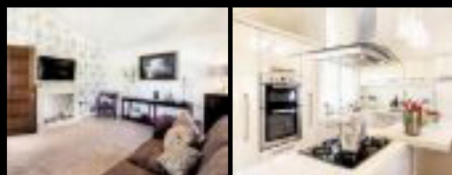

Police also advise security marking tools and bicycles, as well as fitting good locks to shed and garage doors and fixing mesh or bars to the inside of these buildings' windows.

Residents can make their gardens more safe by installing security lights and keeping hedges and bushes cut back so they do not provide a hiding place.

Haverhill Police are asking anyone who sees any sign of a burglary to contact them – and to remain vigilant.

The spokesman added: "We would also ask that if you notice any suspicious behaviour near sheds or garages – such as seeing someone in a garden when you know they are not a resident at the address, or see someone climbing over a fence or wall, or carrying items – and suspect a crime may be in progress that you call police immediately using 999."

CHARITY PARTNERSHIP: Abby Mayes and Rachel Card, from St Nicholas Hospice Care, receive a cheque of £730.21 from James Pilley, of CXG.

Start of a beautiful friendship

A HAVERHILL company is teaming up with a hospice care charity in a new partnership for 2015.

Property managers CXG selected St Nicholas Hospice Care as its charity of the year and, with hundreds of pounds already raised, it looks like the beginning of a fruitful friendship.

The charity will receive two per cent of CXG's commission on every house sale – and £25 from every new let.

Daniel Pilley, owner, said the company believes in "giving back".

"St Nicholas Hospice Care is a charity that is close to the hearts of many local people and provides a fantastic service," he said.

"While there are many charities to choose from, when looking at a long-term partnership we felt the hospice was an integral part of the local community and deserved as much support as possible."

Since September, the business has raised more than £700, which was handed over to the hospice this month.

Abby Mayes, the charity's corporate fundraiser, thanked CXG for its support in helping patients and their families.

Students to put their business ideas to the test

DEBRA FOX

FOUR new businesses, masterminded by students, will be showcased at this year's Haverhill Youth Market.

Youngsters from Castle Manor and Samuel Ward Academies have been split into four groups to create their own businesses – using a grant of just £50 as a start-up.

Launched this week by Alex Till, CEO of MENTA and ONE Haverhill board member, and Karen Chapple, youth skills manager, the challenge will see the teams develop their entrepreneurial skills between now and May.

Mrs Chapple said: "The project encompasses team building, brainstorming, writing a business plan, tackling difficult issues, leadership skills and developing a business from scratch and with just £50 to start it, it will be a real challenge."

Mr Till said he and MENTA are "overjoyed" to be involved in a project which will develop the employability skills of young people.

The businesses will be present to the public on May 16, at the town's second youth market.

Last year's event recently scooped the prize for best Love Your Local Market event at the National Association of British Markets Awards.

Participating students are aged between 13 to 16. Each group will also have to design, make or purchase their product, and find a business mentor.

The winner will be the group with the most amount of profit by the end of the youth market.

Claire Diamond, who teaches business and finance at Castle Manor, and Jo Ager, careers lead at Samuel Ward, both spoke of their students' excitement at taking part in the innovative project.

The launch took place at Haverhill Arts Centre.

Place your bets on Pickles' next move...

AFTER all our efforts to fight against over-development on Haverhill's estates, it is infuriating to read of the decision to refer Havebury's rejected plans to Mr Pickles, the Secretary of State for Communities.

These plans involve adding dwellings and taking away parking spaces in areas which are already overcrowded.

This is contrary to common sense and everything the Government spouts about sustainable development and will inevitably damage the communities involved. Perhaps Mr Pickles hasn't read the title painted on his office door.

Haverhill desperately needs more social housing, but this is not the answer.

UKIP asked Suffolk County Council to release a couple of acres of brownfield land in the town, but when we debated it in full council then all the other parties, Labour, Conservative and LibDem, voted against. The Greens didn't bother to turn up. There is still hope.

Mr Pickles will be under pressure because there is a general election coming, and just this once in five years he will be forced to remember that voters have power. Maybe we should start a book. 10 to 1 he'll put off the decision, 50 to 1 he'll find against the development just before the election and hope we'll vote for his party out of gratitude.

100 to 1 against, he'll force Suffolk County Council to release cheap land within Haverhill and take the pressure off our estates.

Haverhill Family History Group: FEBRUARY'S meeting was held in the Burton Centre, where guest speaker David Waller talked about strategies for 20th Century research.

All who attended, both experienced and novices alike, left with many valuable tips for carrying their research forward.

Several people could not wait to search for information and took advantage of the practical help session that took place in the library following the talk.

The March meeting will take place at 7.30pm on Thursday, March 12, at the Old Independent Church Hall when Dr Ken Sneath will talk about Everyday Life in the 18th Century.

At the April meeting, Wendy Barnes will help with tips and tricks for deciphering handwriting, particularly Tudor and Stuart documents.

Free help sessions continue on Wednesday afternoons at Haverhill Library, 2 - 4pm where there is guided use of the internet aimed especially for newcomers or those who have hit a brick wall. Telephone (01440) 702638 to book your place.

Finally, there will be a coach trip to the National Archives with an alternative drop off at Kew Gardens on May 19.

Burglar steals bag as victims watch TV

DETECTIVES are urging residents to ensure they secure their homes after a walk-in burglary occurred in Haverhill.

The victims were sitting in the living room on Thursday around 6.15pm when they heard the rear patio door into the kitchen slide open at their home in Bartlow Place.

The victim saw a fleeting glimpse of a figure run out through the doors, having stolen a handbag from the kitchen table.

Police were called and a search of the area was carried out, but the suspect was not found.

The only description of the suspect is that they were wearing dark

Anyone who saw any suspicious people in the area, or who has any information about this crime, is asked to contact the Bury St Edmunds Priority Crime Team on 101 quoting reference HH/15/361, or Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111.

Residents are reminded to keep their doors locked at all times and to ensure windows are secured if out or overnight.

It is also advised to secure back gardens where possible with suitable fencing and locked gates.

PEDAL POWER: Haverhill women are being urged to take part in a charity cycle ride

Women needed to get on their bikes

A CHARITY cycle aiming to raise thousands for a hospice charity is calling for Haverhill women to sign up.

Women on Wheels (WoW) is taking place in July – and Haverhill cyclists are being asked to do their bit to support St Nicholas Hospice Care, which has an outreach centre in the town.

In 2014, more than 100 women saddled up and hit the pedals for the charity, helping to raise more than £3,000.

Participants can ride for either 5, 20 or 50 miles.

Cllr Sarah Stamp, St Edmundsbury Borough Council's cabinet member for leisure, culture and heritage, is WoW's ambassador.

She said: "How many of us have a bike in the garage?"

"I am challenging those of us who have been just too busy to enjoy using it to come on this stewarded, social ride and not only feel good, but do good by raising funds for a worthy local cause."

Girls from ages 8 upwards and women of all ages and abilities are being invited to sign up.

The course starts in Nowton Park, Bury St Edmunds.

Visit stnicholashospicecare.org.uk/wow to sign up and for more information.

VALENTINE'S DAY DISCO: Isabelle Gower, Bethany Wrenn and Frankie Robb.

Disco benefits cancer charity

A NIGHT of dancing has raised more than £600 for a cancer charity.

Party goers attended a Valentine's Day Disco at Haverhill Arts Centre, hosted by the Gower family in memory of daughter Jess, who died in 2010.

Friends, families and couples got into the February 14 spirit with a raffle, and many pink-themed refreshments.

More than £670 is now being donated to the charity thanks to the hard work of volunteers and staff, and the generosity of guests.

Mum Shirley Gower said: "We are so grateful to Nick Keeble and the staff at Haverhill Arts Centre who got completely behind us and also to Andy Palazon of Soundwaves Disco who stepped in at a week's notice after a slight change in plans.

"Sainsbury's also very kindly contributed cake boxes from their bakery so that people could take cakes away. All in all it was a fantastic team effort and well worth a bit of hard work."

Partnership in appeal over homes

AN APPEAL has been launched following a decision to refuse plans for new homes.

The planning application, from Havebury Housing Partnership, called for four new homes on Nayland Road in Haverhill – following the demolition of existing garages.

St Edmundsbury Borough Council's Development Control Committee refused the plans in July last year.

Karen Mayhew, chief executive of Havebury, said the organisation had been working alongside its architects to reflect the planning committee's views.

Councillors refused the plans due to the impact they would have on the character and appearance of the area.

Mrs Mayhew said: "As Havebury is committed to providing much-needed affordable homes for those in housing need, we have worked closely with Infinity Architects to incorporate the feedback from the planning committee.

DEBRA FOX

"We are hopeful that the outcome of the appeal will be a positive one."

Five separate applications for new homes were submitted at the same time – with three of them, for Orford Road, Norton Road and Ladygate, thrown out.

Nicola Turley, who lives on Parkside with husband Mark and their children, has fought the plans from the start.

The family would have been most affected by the development at Norton Road.

"We are disappointed to see that the plans to demolish amenities are being put forward yet again," Mrs Turley said.

"Nothing has changed in the last eight months. In fact, if anything, the current strain on local infrastructure alone should make planners think twice about putting any further housing in the area."

New homes near Cambridge Way were approved last year.

Academy is one of first to win award for recycling

PUPILS at Castle Manor Academy have become some of the first winners of a new recycling award.

The prize is handed out to schools, workplaces and communities who have worked hard to increase their recycling, and incorporate it into their daily routine.

Staff and students alike have been learning more about the benefits of recycling their waste, and have collected an increased amount of drinks cans – so much so that extra recycling collections have had to be made at the academy, on Haverhill's Eastern Avenue.

Becky Baldwin, outdoor learning co-ordinator, said: "I'm really pleased that the hard work put in by everybody at the school has been recognised through the Green Can Award scheme, and to be one of the first winners is something we are proud to have achieved."

The school was recognised by Every Can Counts, which was set up in 2009 with an aim to increase the number of cans recycled.

Joining the recycling programme is free of charge, and recycling tools are provided to establishments on signing up.

Amy Billingham presented Castle Manor with the award.

She said: "We will be using their excellent example to show other organisations around the country how easy it is to recycle more and make a difference."

You've got the power to switch

ONE of the best ways to save money is to switch your energy supplier – a great way to cut your bills without changing your habits.

Millions of households have already switched and saved – and many more could save around £200 a year. If you've never switched before or if you haven't switched for a few years, you could save even more.

So what does switching suppliers actually involve?

There are 26 energy companies supplying households and you can decide which ones provide your gas and electricity. You can choose one company to provide both or two different companies – it's up to you.

To switch energy suppliers, you can go online or ring up the companies directly. There are also lots of price comparison websites to help you compare deals quickly and easily – look out for Ofgem-accredited sites for extra peace of mind (a list is available at the link below).

It can take as little as 15 minutes to apply to switch. You'll need to answer a few questions about your property and current energy use, so it's a good idea to have a recent energy bill handy.

ADVERTISING FEATURE

Your old and new suppliers will then work together to complete the switch, usually in less than three weeks.

Most people are looking to save money when they switch but suppliers differ in lots of ways, not just on price. For example you might want a fixed-rate deal or a high customer satisfaction rating, or you might want to use renewable energy sources.

Switching energy supplier is now quicker and easier than ever before. There's never been a better time to switch – make sure you act today!

Find out more about how you can switch and save at BeAnEnergyShopper.com.

If you are not online and need help to switch, call the Energy Saving Advice Service on 0300 123 1234 or Home Energy Scotland on 0800 808 2282.

Resurfacing road follows repainting

COMPLAINTS are once again being made about the state of Haverhill's roads – after the same street had to be closed twice for improvement work.

DEBRA FOX

Local residents were left confused after Mount Road, in the town centre, was recently resurfaced – having only been repainted in the run up to Christmas.

Alan Rigarsford, a resident of Meeting Walk, lives nearby and branded the work a “mistake” which would cause taxpayers’ money to be spent unnecessarily.

He said: “I think this is gross incompetence with public money – there is no other way to put it. “I think local people see these things happen and just think ‘what a waste of money’ but put it to the back of their mind and carry on.”

“Now with the austerity measures that are going on, and with services being cut, I think it is a waste.”

Mr Rigarsford has lived at his current home for six years, and uses Mount Road to get to his property.

A spokesman for Suffolk County Council, the local authority responsible for highways, confirmed that the lines were repainted in 2014 at the request of the police.

He added: “This was asked to be done as soon as possible so the police could enforce parking and waiting restrictions on the road.

“This was part of a local initiative to better manage illegal parking.”

When this work was done, a date was already in place for the road resurfacing, the spokesman said. This took place earlier in the month.

He added: “The resurfacing took place in early February, at which time the lines had been renewed.

“We apologise for any inconvenience caused.”

COUNTRY NIGHT: Hank Wangford and the Lost Cowboys will play at Haverhill Arts Centre.

Saddle up for night of country music

A COUNTRY music performance will take place in Haverhill next week.

Hailed as the King of Pain and admired across the world, Hank Wangford will entertain the town's country music fans, experience.

Hank will play the arts centre on March 7 from 8pm. Tickets are £12.50. To book yours call (01440) 714140. You can also visit haverhillartscentre.co.uk

Chamber offers support to county's small businesses

DEBRA FOX

A PILOT scheme supporting small businesses has launched across Suffolk.

Delivered by the county's chamber of commerce, the scheme aims to provide cashback payments to those businesses which buy additional non-mandatory training for their staff.

It is hoped this will encourage companies to invest in increasing their employees' skills.

As well as being supported by Employer Ownership Funding and Norfolk Chamber of Commerce, the Employer Training Incentive Pilot has been praised by Matthew Hancock, MP for West Suffolk and business minister.

He said: "It is an exciting opportunity for Norfolk and Suffolk based SMEs to make a positive impact on their staff and the local business economy."

Mr Hancock officially launched the scheme at Mildenhall College Academy this month.

Businesses with fewer than 250 employees in both counties can receive 25 per cent of money spent on training their staff. The payment can be up to £1,000 per learner.

John Dugmore is the chief executive of Suffolk Chamber of Commerce.

He said: "As the voice of business,

both Norfolk and Suffolk Chambers will be encouraging employers to take advantage of the pilot that enables employer autonomy over important skills investment."

The scheme is also an extension of the Greater Ipswich City Deal, with other partners including Suffolk County Council and the New Anglia Skills Board.

Cllr Lisa Chambers, the county's cabinet member for education and skills, has praised the pilot as a benefit to both businesses and their workforce.

Official opening for new homes

A DEVELOPMENT of new homes will be opened next month after years of anticipation.

The £1.6 million scheme, at Haverhill's Greenwood Close, will be officially opened by Cllr Anne Gower, who is St Edmundsbury Borough Council's cabinet member for housing.

There will be four, three and two bedroom homes on the site, which has been designed by Havebury Housing Partnership, as well as two bungalows, each with two bedrooms.

Plans to replace the flats that were previously on the street were approved in 2011, and the building work was carried out by Mansell Balfour Beatty.

Car parking has been provided alongside the new homes, and major work was carried out on the surrounding highways.

Following the unveiling, which will take place on March 4, celebrations will take place at St Felix Church, Haverhill.

'The world mustn't be complacent about

The past year Paulina Johnson has watched on, helpless, as the Ebola epidemic has ravaged her home country of Sierra Leone, leaving horror, despair and death in its wake. As the body count continues to rise, the mum of four tells Lydia Fallon why "we must not forget."

EBOLA. One word. Five letters. A synonym for such unfathomable horror.

We've all seen the news bulletins; stared at TV screens open-mouthed as this merciless disease sweeps through West Africa, leaving a deadly legacy. Men, women, children: Ebola stops for no one. It ruins lives, tears apart families, and leaves whole countries in ruin.

Anyone with a heart couldn't help but be shocked by the plight of Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone, but, when it's your own country facing up to such devastation, your family facing infection, the fear is incomprehensible; the anger constant. As Paulina Johnson, a proud Sierra Leonean now living in Cambourne, describes. "When I think of Ebola it makes me feel sad, helpless, and sometimes angry. It's merciless and it's cruel," the 46-year-old says, a sense of foreboding in her words.

"The saddest thing is when you see a child dying of Ebola, and when they die, the parents aren't even allowed to hold them. I recall when my premature baby daughter died, I was given time with her... I can't even imagine the psychological effects of what they are going through."

The Ebola outbreak began in a tiny village in Guinea in December 2013, with the death of a two-year-old boy called Emile who was suffering from diarrhoea and fever, and rapidly became the deadliest occurrence of the disease since its discovery in 1976. As of January 31, 8,936 people have already lost their lives, a figure which continues to rise as each day goes by.

Sierra Leone has been one of the worst hit of the West African nations, and Paulina's family, many of whom live in the capital Freetown, tell of a country falling apart at the seams: food and living prices have quadrupled, schools and workplaces have locked their doors and crime is rife.

Paulina has been sending money to help, but is fearful of what the future holds. "I worry that my nieces and nephews will go off the rails with nothing to do. My nephew was robbed in a taxi and many young people are now getting into crime. I've had to think of alternatives for them, putting them into computer school, sending pocket money just to keep them occupied," she explains.

"It's hard to understand where the hate is coming from; it's not the Sierra Leone we knew. Our doors are always open; if we're sitting on the veranda someone will just walk in and say: 'What have you got to drink?' But now everyone has to lock their doors.

"When you meet a Sierra Leonean, the first thing we do when saying hello is to open our arms to embrace. That's why Sierra Leone is known in West Africa as the friendliest country. Now people are afraid to even hug someone."

One part of the problem is awareness. The Sierra Leoneans, Paulina explains, are renowned for their laid-back attitude, and it's taken a while for the enormity of the Ebola crisis to hit home.

"Initially my nephew didn't take it seriously 'Oh Ebola it's not for us, it's for the people in the slums,' and I had to tell them 'No guys, Ebola doesn't pick; it's here and it kills.'"

"They have the attitude 'Oh well, let's get on with it' but I think that's starting to change, we're getting there slowly."

Thankfully, none of Paulina's family has contracted Ebola, but the outbreak did mean she was unable to fly to Sierra Leone for her 94-year-old mother's funeral. "It was heartbreaking," says Paulina, simply. "We knew she was nearing death but we really didn't want her to die then because we wanted to go back to celebrate her life and we knew we couldn't. I never imagined I wouldn't even be at my own mum's funeral. It really knocked me for six."

A devout Christian, it has, she admits, tested her faith at times. "There are times when I feel annoyed with God, because I keep thinking why? Sierra Leone is such a poor country anyway, and then for something like this to happen. But then, at the same time, I think 'Why did He save me?' In doing all this He was saving me in one way or another."

On those darkest of days, Paulina has found comfort in her work for the Oakington-based charity CBM UK, which works to transform the lives of people with disabilities in the world's poorest countries.

She started volunteering for the charity when she first moved to Cambridge, and is now a data officer there, generating weekly reports and seeing first-hand how important their work is.

"One of the attractions for me working with CBM is that indirectly I'm helping people in Africa," Paulina says. "They've been in Sierra Leone since 1980, and I know that they'll be there for the future too. Sometimes charities go to Africa, start something, go home and then it all collapses, but that's not the case with CBM."

The charity launched its Ebola Emergency Appeal last October, and has raised over £25,000 so far and counting. In a crisis situation, those with disabilities can miss out on vital information that will protect them; CBM is dedicated to providing help and support to ensure that's not the case. From posters and leaflets in braille, to mental health awareness programmes in vulnerable communities; they've introduced a number of measures to ensure no one is forgotten. "I see the fundraising total rise and think 'Yes! We're getting what we need,' says Paulina. "I know getting that money over there will help a whole lot; you can't imagine how many people it's going to help, and it feels good to be part of that."

Paulina was born on the small island of Bonte near Sierra Leone, but grew up in the capital Freetown. She describes a "beautiful, cosmopolitan country, rich with lush greenery, stunning beaches, and friendly people."

But that all changed when the civil war broke out in 1994. A brutal, bloody war, it raged on for 10 long years. "It was one of the worst wars; there were people chopping off hands – they'd ask if you wanted short sleeves or long sleeves, and sometimes, if they saw a pregnant woman they'd flip a coin and say 'Boy or girl', and then cut open the woman's tummy."

"The most shocking memory I have was when I saw a rebel's head on a stick. It was one of the most dreadful things I've ever seen."

Paulina left Sierra Leone in 1997 to join her husband in Cambridge. It was a tough decision, but the right one, she says, given the rebels took Freetown only a week later. "I don't know where all the hatred came from, we have such a friendly character, but nobody trusted each other during the civil war," she says.

Sierra Leone finally emerged from a decade of war in 2002, and has been making major steps towards reconciliation, something which makes the Ebola outbreak even harder to swallow. "People were getting their lives back together before Ebola; things were picking up," Paulina says. "After the civil war, the government were asking everyone to come back and help rebuild the country, and a lot of people did, but most of them left again after Ebola."

"It's really sad," she sighs. But there are grounds for optimism. In January Sierra Leone recorded the lowest weekly total of confirmed Ebola cases since August, and there are positive signs a cure could soon be found. Paulina hopes this will be the case, but remains cautious about what lies ahead. "What happens after Ebola?" she wonders. "What happens when all the help moves out? I worry it's not going to get any better."

"Yes there's a decline in case load but there're still new infections, so the struggle continues. The world must not become complacent about Ebola."

Paulina hopes by sharing her story she will make people realise that West Africa's plight cannot be forgotten. "This is my small way of contributing to the Ebola awareness, making people realise it is still there. There's not so much in the news now, and this is sad because people are still dying, and we can't just sit back and watch it happen," she concludes.

"My wish is to see Sierra Leone back to the care-free, lovely, friendly country it is."

CHILDREN and their teachers could be spotted in some wacky clothing raising money for an awareness week.

The youngsters at Barnardiston Hall got into the crazy spirit of things in aid of World Orphan Week (WOW), which is celebrated across the world in March.

Money will go towards helping orphaned and abandoned children at the new SOS children's village in Chipata, Zambia.

NHS Foundation Trust is put into special measures

AN "INADEQUATE" health trust has been placed into special measures.

The NHS Foundation Trust covering both Suffolk and Norfolk was found to have "serious problems" in an inspection towards the end of 2014 – and now work will begin immediately to improve services.

Monitor, the regulator for health services in England, made the decision last week. Alan Yates has been appointed as improvement director to the trust and a number of other procedures will be put in motion.

DEBRA FOX

The Care Quality Commission rated the trust "inadequate" in its report following an inspection in October, and said special measures may be necessary.

Michael Scott, chief executive of the Norfolk and Suffolk NHS Foundation Trust, said: "Although disappointing, it is not a surprise to us, coming as it does after the CQC's recommendations made in January."

"But as we made clear then, we recognise we need to improve the care we provide and we need to carefully manage our finances to a healthier position."

Being placed in special measures means that the trust will be buddied with another NHS trust, and that a quality improvement plan will be developed for it to follow.

Mr Scott welcomed the "additional support" being provided to the trust, and also added that "every single member of staff" will play their part in the improvement.

Quality status for hospital team

A HOSPITAL unit has been re-awarded a national accreditation.

Staff at West Suffolk Hospital's radiology unit are celebrating after being recognised for providing a safe and high quality service.

The Imaging Services Accreditation Scheme (ISAS) was first given to the hospital in 2011, when it became the only one in the region to receive the honour.

It is now one of five hospitals in East Anglia to hold the acclaimed status.

Nigel Beeton, imaging services manager at the hospital, said: "We are delighted that we have been re-awarded this prized nationally accreditation.

"It comes following a lot of hard work and is testament to the dedication of our team."

The recognition also gives patients assurance that they are receiving a high quality service, he added.

The hospital will retain its accreditation status for four years.

the GUIDE*Tribute to Floyd

ON STAGE: The Australian Pink Floyd Show

THOSE expert Antipodean purveyors of excellent Pink Floyd music – The Australian Pink Floyd Show (TAPFS) – are undertaking their annual tour of Britain, including a stop at Cambridge Corn Exchange.

This year's tour is called 'Welcome to the Machine' which alludes to a track off their follow-up album to Dark Side of the Moon – Wish You Were Here, which is celebrating its 40th anniversary this year.

In the past, the Aussie tribute band has performed the Floyd's 1973 magnum opus in its entirety, and this time, it's the turn of Wish You Were Here, famous for the track, Shine On You Crazy Diamond, Floyd's tribute to their founder, Cambridge legend Syd Barrett.

On release in 1975, Wish shot straight to the top of the UK album chart (something Dark Side didn't quite manage).

Some people at the time thought the album was only successful on the coattails of its predecessor, but Jason Sawford, founder member and keyboard maestro of TAPFS doesn't think that at all.

"I personally think it's a great album," he says. "Obviously Dark Side is Pink Floyd's absolute masterpiece, Wish comes a close second."

With it being the 40th anniversary, will TAPFS be performing the whole of the album?

"Yes we are, as well as drawing heavily from Dark Side and The Division Bell. We'll also be touching on The Wall as well."

But we can hope for a few surprises too, right? "That's right," says Jason. "We may be doing a number in tribute to Syd Barrett, probably Astronomy Domine as it works very well in the set; and we may have a go at one of the songs from Endless River."

As well as faithfully recreating the sound of Pink Floyd (so much so that Floyd's drummer Nick Mason has gone on record saying that the Aussie outfit are probably better than Floyd ever was), the show boasts some of the best visuals in the business.

However, performing note-perfect recreations of known songs can be difficult Jason admits. "I've got to programme all the correct sounds into the keyboards and while I've done a lot of it in the past, it can still take weeks to do."

"We have to create the exact sounds and it sometimes depends on the piece of equipment we're using."

But is the band ever tempted to do a song a different way?

"Well, the music is always faithful to the albums, but Floyd used to improvise early on and we listen to all the various versions and we do make it sound like Floyd improvising, and not like another band."

"Finally, you have to have a certain mindset. For this music you have to be focused and disciplined – it's very much like being a classical musician."

The band has been performing the music of Pink Floyd for nearly 30 years now, does Jason still enjoy the job? "Well, it IS a job and I'm no longer a young man, but I still enjoy playing and of course it's great music to play – and there's the audience reaction which is always great."

And there could be more to come... "There's loads more I'd like to do from the Floyd catalogue," admits Jason. "The Obscured By Clouds album has some lovely songs. There's a lot of scope."

Words and interview by Martin Hutchinson.

Emma Johnson

Do you have many links with Cambridge?
Yes, I went to Pembroke College and I'm an Honorary Fellow so I come back quite often. I'm really looking forward to my visit next month – Cambridge feels like a second home to me.

What is your lingering impression of the city?

I studied English literature and loved it, but from an early stage it was clear that music was going to be my thing. For the second part of my degree they allowed me to change and study music. It was a wonderful time. It was good to be surrounded by so many people who were good at music and excited by it. In those days, that period just before everyone had mobile phones, if you wanted someone to come to your rehearsal, you had to cycle across the city and put a note on their door, so it helped keep you fit too!

What inspired you to play the clarinet?

I loved the sound of it. I was already obsessed by playing the recorder, which I'd had from about the age of 4, so when they offered clarinet lessons at my primary school I jumped at the chance. I love the fact that it's such a vocal instrument, it seems to sing. In many ways, playing the clarinet is similar to singing. When I feel an emotion whilst playing, I'm aware this communicates itself to the audience.

How do you manage to balance the demands of rehearsing, touring and recording with a personal life?

Music is a vocation so it does rather take over your life. But I'm very fortunate to have a lovely daughter and, naturally, she is my priority, so I would always put anything to do with her first. She wouldn't want me to stop playing music

World famous clarinettist Emma Johnson will perform alongside the acclaimed European Union Chamber Orchestra at Cambridge Corn Exchange as part of this year's Cambridge News-backed Cambridge Classical Concert Series. ANDREW BURTON spoke to her about studying in Cambridge and how music has taken over her life and the music itself benefits from me having a family.

What would you say to someone reading this who is thinking of coming along but isn't used to attending classical concerts?

Concerts are much less formal than they used to be. There aren't any 'rules' as far as I'm aware. It's a very appealing programme on March 5, opening with Holst's St Paul's Suite, and including Greig's Two Elegiac Melodies and Mozart's Symphony No. 33. And the Mozart Clarinet Concerto, which I will be playing, is such a delightful piece of music, a real masterpiece. So I would say come along and enjoy the music, whether you're old or young, a regular concert-goer or a first timer.

What else might you have done with your life if you had not become a clarinettist?

My other idea was to become a writer and was very supported by my English teacher at school. That's how I got into Cambridge to read English. Always at the back of my mind, I keep asking myself: 'When are you going to write that book you've never written?' But I never have time.

What important lessons has being a musician taught you?

One of the nice things about music is that if you really work hard at it and have your own take on it then I think you can get somewhere in music. It also teaches you to remain very humble the whole time because one moment the audience is applauding but the next minute you might find that your reed has died on you and it squeaks so you feel a bit of a fool. The reeds that we use in clarinets are just reeds that you would find growing beside a pond; there's nothing high tech about them, and they are prone to breaking now and again. So it really helps keep you humble.

If you could transport yourself back in time and be present at the premiere performance of any piece of classical music in history, which would you choose?

Definitely Mozart's Clarinet Concerto. It would be absolutely fascinating to see how Anton Stadler, for whom Mozart composed it, played it at that first public performance. Stadler was a friend of Mozart's, they were both Freemasons together, and he was said to be a 'happy go lucky' sort of chap and in fact a bit of a rogue. He often borrowed money from Mozart and he actually lost the original manuscript of the concerto so scholars have been a bit hard on him. The story was that he pawned it because he ran out of money but then it was never seen again. He must have been a lot of fun to be around and he certainly inspired Mozart to write a number of heavenly pieces such as the Clarinet Concerto I'll be playing in Cambridge with the European Union Chamber Orchestra.

■ European Union Chamber Orchestra, Cambridge Corn Exchange, Thursday, March 5, at 7.30pm. Tickets £28.50-£38.50 from (01223) 357851 / cornex.co.uk.

Focus on your garden

EVER thought about how to capture frost-covered holly, close-ups of pretty petals or swathes of woodland bulbs in fading light?

If you've not had much success taking good pictures of your plants, eminent flower and plant photographer Clive Nichols offers some useful pointers on how aspiring horticultural photographers can create pictures to frame proudly rather than instantly delete.

"If you're shooting outdoors, give yourself the best possible chance of success and select somewhere photogenic. The garden of a National Trust or English Heritage property would be a good place to start, or alternatively a well-maintained public or privately-owned garden," says Nichols, who runs online courses on the subject.

"Of course, if you're lucky enough to have a wonderful garden of your own, start there."

The National Gardens Scheme (www.ngs.org.uk) has thousands of gardens that open nationwide to the public in all seasons, so check on your nearest open garden and go and visit – chat to the owners and they may well allow you to take some photographs.

Take note of the weather, he advises.

"Unless you want shots with subject movement, you should ideally shoot on a day when there's little wind."

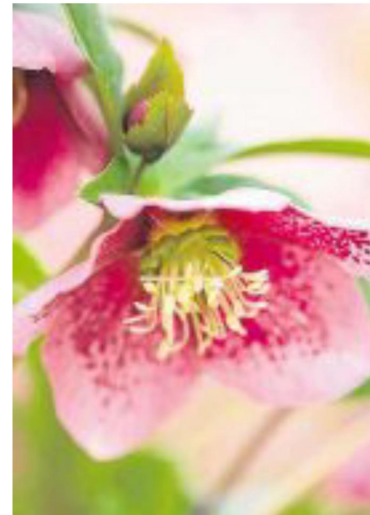

One of the major mistakes that amateurs make when photographing plants and gardens is to shoot in bright sunlight.

"Although your brain is saying 'Wow, this garden looks amazing', your pictures will probably be disappointing because of dark inky shadows and bright, burnt-out highlights.

"Put simply, your pictures will probably be too contrasty. Shooting on overcast days with a bit of sunshine pushing through the clouds will undoubtedly yield better results as the soft, diffused light allows you to capture the subtle colour and texture of flowers and plants.

"Choosing the right time of day is also important. You can get good shots in the middle of the day, but I prefer to shoot with early morning or late afternoon light, when the sunlight is raking across gardens, throwing shadows which add three-dimensionality and depth to your photos.

For garden scenes, look for interesting features such as statues, topiary, fountains or sundials and shoot along pathways to lead the viewers' eyes into the photo, Nichols advises.

"Combinations of colourful flowers in borders can be very photogenic, so using a zoom lens to fill the frame with flowers works well. Keep your composition simple and don't include anything that doesn't contribute to your composition.

"Things like plant labels or part of an ugly fence in the background can spoil a good picture. If you're shooting close-ups outdoors, select a specimen that's in good condition and isolate it against a plain, distraction-free background.

"You can of course create wonderful flower images by buying some attractive specimens from your local florist and photographing them indoors. I personally like to shoot them simply, using natural daylight from a nearby window. If one side of the subject is too dark, you can reflect light back onto it using a piece of white card."

You don't need a camera bag full of expensive equipment to shoot good horticultural photographs, he continues.

"It's best to keep things simple for wider garden scenes and take just one or two lenses – ideally a zoom and a wide-angle. If you want to get in really close to your subjects and fill the frame with a small part of a flower or plant, a macro lens is the answer."

Most gardens look at their most colourful, vibrant best in spring and summer, but Nichols takes as many pictures in autumn and winter. Frost, snow and autumnal mists and fog add extra drama to your garden and plant photographs, so get up early to take some amazing photographs – ones that you will be proud to show to family and friends.

A1 gets 3-cylinder TFSI

WEIGHING up the pros and cons of petrol and diesel power becomes a little harder for Audi A1 customers from today as a new super-frugal, 97g/km TFSI version of the three or five-door subcompact becomes available in the UK.

Equipped with a characterful new three-cylinder engine – the first petrol unit with this configuration ever to be installed in an Audi model – the latest A1 variant promises to bring 67mpg-plus economy, peppy performance and the premium hallmarks that distinguish every Audi within even easier reach with an OTR price starting from £14,315.

The 95PS turbocharged three-cylinder petrol engine effectively replaces the 89PS 1.2-litre four-cylinder engine available in the A1 since launch. It can call on a healthy 160Nm of torque to propel the A1 1.0 TFSI with standard five-speed manual gearbox to 62mph from rest in 10.9 seconds, regardless of whether it is powering the three-door or five-door Sportback body style. A seven-speed S tronic twin-clutch transmission is also available, and with this installed the acceleration time is also unchanged in both versions. Top speed is 116mph in every case.

THE AUDI A1: 97g/km TFSI option kicks in at £14,315

Equally importantly, the new engine can return up to 67.3mpg in the A1 when linked to the standard manual gearbox, or 64.2mpg in conjunction with the S tronic transmission, equating to CO2 figures of 97g/km and 102g/km respectively. Again, these figures apply regardless of the body style chosen.

For comparison, the 1.6-litre TDI which retains its position as the most frugal option in the updated range now benefits from an economy boost from 74.3mpg to 80.7mpg according to the combined cycle test, and a CO2 reduction from 99g/km to 92g/km in both body styles.

CUTER: New Vitara has 4WD option

Suzuki's new Vitara tagged from £14k

MORE than 25 years after the original model's debut, the all-new Vitara has smaller dimensions to meet contemporary needs and incorporates Suzuki's cutting-edge ALLGRIP four wheel drive system as an option.

The new Vitara is powered by the M16A 1.6-litre petrol engine or the D16AA 1.6-litre DDIS engine. For the diesel engine, a new EGR (Exhaust Gas Recirculation) system and an electronically controlled VGT (Variable Geometry Turbocharger) help achieve powerful, torquey performance.

Prices start at £13,999 for the 1.6 SZ4.

Dacia celebrates 10 years of success

DACIA will celebrate the 10th anniversary since its European re-launch in 2005 at the 85th Geneva International Motor Show where new special edition versions of the Sandero, Duster and Logan MCV will be unveiled.

Ten years have passed since the Logan was launched in Europe in 2005, heralding the dawn of a bright new era for the Romanian brand Dacia, whose Renault-led rebirth proved to be the catalyst for unprecedented levels of success across the continent.

To celebrate these 10 glorious years, Dacia is producing a series of special edition versions across its range, including the Sandero, Duster and Logan MCV. In the UK, this special edition will be called 'Lauréate Prime'. True to the brand's ethos and image, these special edition vehicles will be well-equipped while remaining simple at heart, and will come in an exclusive metallic Cosmos Blue finish.

They will stand out through their distinctive styling trims and will be equipped with a new multimedia and navigation package as standard – Dacia MEDIA NAV Evolution.

Blue is the colour traditionally associated with the Dacia brand, and these special edition versions will pay tribute to that by including exclusive metallic Cosmos Blue paintwork as standard.

The Lauréate Prime special edition versions stand out through a series of specific styling features, including 'Dark Metal' alloy wheels and door mirror housings.

The standard Lauréate interior is enhanced by subtle touches of blue on the upholstery and seatbelts, complimenting the Cosmos Blue metallic exterior. Tasteful grey top-stitching for the seats and special front and rear blue-edged floor mats complete the look.

Full details on UK specification and pricing will be available in early spring.

Turner red card ends cup hopes

CHARLIE Turner's red card proved costly for Haverhill Borough as they lost 3-1 in their First Division Cup semi-final at Sudbury reserves on Tuesday.

The hosts went in front but both sides had a player sent off following an altercation between Borough keeper Turner and a Sudbury defender.

Gavin Taylor had to go in goal and the visitors went further ahead before Martin Westcott reduced the arrears.

At the weekend Borough had better fortune as they enjoyed a 3-0 victory at home to third-placed Debenham in the First Division.

Borough took the lead in the 16th minute when Harry O'Connor volleyed home.

Skipper Ryan Weaver doubled the lead on the half hour following a quick counter-attack by Luke Latham.

Westcott and Jon Milne went close to extending the lead in the second half before Jorge McCullum set up fellow debutant Kieran O'Neill to complete the scoring.

Haverhill Rovers endured a tougher time in their Premier Division match at leaders Norwich United, however, going down 3-0.

A 10-minute spell in the second half proved costly for Rovers, who matched their opponents for much of the game.

Nick Wilderspin and Marc Abbott had chances to score in a goalless first half but it was a momentary lapse by Will Gardner in the 65th minute that allowed Norwich to score.

The lead was doubled four minutes later and with 15 minutes left Rovers' fate was sealed as Norwich netted their third.

Brazier takes better ball victory

RICHARD Brazier was part of the winning pairing in the fourball better ball competition at the latest meeting of the Suffolk Winter Alliance.

Haverhill's Brazier teamed up with Ely City's John Wilding for the tournament at Brett Vale, with the duo scoring 42.

Brazier's clubmates, Paul Bartlett and Trevor Broomfield, were second on countback from John Williams, of Stoke-by-Nayland, and Braintree's David Yates after both pairs scored 41.

Tom Daniels came out on top in Haverhill's men's February stableford competition.

Daniels, who won Division Two, scored 39 points to narrowly take the win.

Martin Mansfield was second in Daniels' division with 33 and Murray

McKenzie third on 31.

Luke Williams won Division One on countback from Paul Bartlett after both scored 38.

Matthew Farlie took third place with 33.

Kieron Bailey's 34 was enough to see him take Division Three victory by one point from Grant Kingston.

Michael Fowler was third in the division on 29.
